Puzzling Rail Freight Situation in the East
For the last month grain from Georgian Bay ports to the Canadian Atlantic ports of Halifax and St. John, a rate of $1.00 per bushel has been up to December 1 when it was increased to 9.1 cents a bushel. Thus a low rail freight rate when competition prevailed and Montreal was getting most of the business, but as soon as the rail rates were increased the rail road was immediately boosted .3.1 cents per bushel. The port of the Canadian railways is far away to the winter hauling of grain which is rather puzzling just so long as the rates are forced to remain high. The railroads contend this is done, but immediately navigation and shipping rates are forced up to impossible levels.

Wholesale Prices in France
The latest official estimate of the 1932 wheat crop in France is 230,000,000 bushels. This is the figure of the Canadian trade commissioner in Paris. He makes out that other estimates put it at 1,000,000 bushels and he believes it is 267,450,000 bushels. This provides enough wheat for the present requirements and indications are that there will be a surplus of over 50 million bushels. This surplus has reduced the price of wheat on the Paris market from 2.14 francs on the July 1st to 1.36 in October. Prices are now little changed.

Wheat growing in France is considered the most important in the country's industry and it is the policy of every government to afford it adequate protection. The price of wheat in Paris averages $2.04 a bushel in 1931.

Various proposals have been advanced to meet the current pre-monic price of wheat but the only important step made so far has been the recent statement of the finance minister of the government of a stock of 25,000,000 bushels of wheat to be carried by railroads and stored on the premises of the producers themselves.

The government is also considering the introduction of a small premium when this stock is finally placed on the market. The existing restrictions include a ban on the importation of imports, and the granting of import bounties, which have been gradually reduced to meet the new situation.

French millers, however, are reducing the price of flour to encourage wheat for milling. At the present time only one per cent for wheat is paid by French millers.

Total exports of wheat into Europe during the first nine months of the present year amounted to 32,324,625 bushels.

World Wheat Visits

The figure of world wheat "sales" supplies as at Dec. 13 was 455,232,500 bushels compared with 468,907,000 on the same date of the previous year.

Little Change in Production in U.S. When Crop

The United States government report last Dec. 20 indicated sowings of 34,900,000 acres of wheat or a decrease of only 1.3 per cent from last year. If any body would like to know the benefit from acreage reduction it is the United States farmers.

They are the ones who have the history of a dry seed bed and poor conditions for sowing, and a huge amount of rain. The result is that while the U.S. growers went ahead and seeded almost as great an acre as they did the previous year, the crop is not maturing. Much grain did not germinate. The condition is estimated at 60 per cent of new wheat which indicates a loss of little over 400 million bushels unless exceptional conditions prevail next spring.

Canadian and British Preference

The question as to whether Canada, which comes from the United States port, would get the best of the 6 cents a bushel British preference appears to be settled.

The decision is that wheat must be consigned directly from Canada and not through the U.S. exchange, if it is to be successful.

Canadian and British preference, particularly in the south and Halifax, parties bring up the point that wheat should be confined to wheat shipped from Canadian ports.

This is a very valuable trade of large proportions flowing from their harbors.

Westerners who oppose the movement to restrict the British preference to wheat shipped from Canadian ports have argued that a narrow-minded and selfish unmindfulness of the welfare of Canada, and the rest of the country, to the U.S. ports. This is not true. The people of the west are as anxious as any others to see that Canada develop and all portions prosperous, but they don't want the burden always of carrying the cost of transport.

The western wheat grower depends upon world markets. He is bound to sell his wheat at the highest right from the heart of the continent.

This situation does not appear to be changing. It is one of Canada's keenest wheat exporting rivals.

The wheat farmers in those countries are as anxious to do well as the Canadian farmer. Every added expense in transport, and in restricting the outlets for his grain make it more difficult for him to compete. With the exception in full swing Australia and Argentina the western Canadian farmer is having a terrible time competing for grain markets as it is now. Any
